- Students are well integrated into school life, which contributes to the development of their personal attributes and self-confidence.
- School's leadership adopts a collaborative approach in managing operations and seeks to establish effective communication channels with parents, partners, and local community institutions to enhance students' diverse talents and interests.
- School plans require greater focus on priorities, with clear follow-up mechanisms based on more accurate self-evaluation results.
- Overall, students' performance needs improvement, particularly in raising their standards in basic skills across subjects.
- There is a need for stronger emphasis on developing teachers' professional development programmes aligned with their actual needs to improve classroom practices and the implementation of academic support programmes.
